Another Binckley on the Carpet.

A Richmond Pettifogger Distinguishes Himself.

IMPORTANT RAILWAY PROJECTS.

Direct Lines to New York and Cincinnati.

Special Dispatch to the Commercial.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 11, 1868.

Another Binckley Come to Grief.

A slight ripple of excitement was occasioned here to-day by the telegraphic announcement from New York that one of the morning papers contained some startling developments about revenue frauds. An examination of the paper in question shows that another Binckley has come to light, and also to grief. There is printed six and a half columns furnished by one John B. Gilmer, of Richmond, whereof about six columns are letters from Gilmer to Secretary McCulloch, Commissioner Rollins, Collector [illegible], Supervisor [illegible], Special Agent Richards, and others, while the remaining half column contains brief letters to him from these persons. The sum and substance of the thing is, that Gilmer wanted to run the whole revenue machine in Virginia in his own way, and promised if he could he would endeavor to do so, and that he would accomplish great things. The Treasury officials could not see it in that light, and Gilmer accordingly prints his wordy letters and the notes he was able to worry out of McCulloch and his subordinates. Gilmer is a small pettifogger of Richmond, who undertook about a year ago to expound the Constitution and reconstruction laws to General Schofield when he was in command of Virginia. He has been trying for two months or more to get employment from the Secretary of the Treasury, and assumes to know a good deal more about Revenue law than any one in that Department. He is one of Binckley's principal "cronies," and his letters are of such a character that they would be called Binckley's if they were not signed with Gilmer's name.

Supervisors Confirmed.

The Secretary of the Treasury to-day confirmed the appointments of John G. Nash to be Supervisor of Internal Revenue for Tennessee; Milton I. Saffold, for Alabama, Georgia and Florida; James R. [illegible], for Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

Important Railway Project.

A public meeting will be held here to-morrow noon of citizens who favor an air line railroad to New York and a more direct railway connection with Cincinnati and Washington. The call is signed by Chief Justice Cartter, Judge Olin, Mayor Bowen, and a large number of prominent persons. The Evening Star in commenting on the matter says it earnestly hopes that all classes will be represented at the meeting, that some system of agitation will be agreed upon, a proper committee be appointed to put the subject in a practical shape, and all proper influence be brought to bear on Congress to procure favorable legislation on this subject.

THE GOBELIN TAPESTRY.

How it is Made.

At the Gobelins we found English, Germans, and Turks following the minute labor required to produce the celebrated Gobelin tapestry, which imitates oil paintings so wonderfully that they only make one feel sorry that they are wool work; the colors are admirable, the contours firm and rounded, and at a short distance, when the stitches disappear, it is often difficult to recognize them as tapestry. It needs a fair artistic training to excel in this work, which demands intelligence, taste, and an immense amount of attention and patience. The workmen are pupils of the establishment, earn good salaries, and receive pensions after a long number of years, during which their eyes and perseverance must be severely tried. They work from the back of the tapestry. Stretched upright before them is a multiplicity of threads forming the warp; behind them is the painted model; and it is curious to see how skillfully they mix the wools and silks to get the tones of the paintings, and how laboriously they lay in, with the aid of bobbins, the countless threads. One melancholy workman most politely explained to us the process—how they were obliged to mix many colored wools together on the same bobbin, as painters mix their colors on their palettes, to obtain certain tints, and how, after a number of combinations, they often had to undo their work. He was working with three others at a large carpet, intended for the palace of Fontainebleau, which had been begun in January last, and which they hoped to finish in four years. The carpets are worked in front; the stitches made long, and then cut, to produce the soft, thick, luxurious pile. The manufacture is an imperial one, supported as an industrial school, and none of the productions are sold. The secret of Jean Gobelin's magnificent colors, which made him an immense fortune, and gave him a lettre de noblesse when, in the middle ages, he established himself as dyer in that same quarter on the banks of the Bièvre river, seems to remain a precious heirloom to the Gobelin manufacture. It was supposed at that time that Jean's secret lay in the wonderful properties of the waters of the Bièvre, so numbers of dyers set up there, but they could none of them produce Gobelin's reds and purples, so the river fell out of repute and out of sight too, for it now flows unseen beneath the houses of the Rue Mouffetard. Thus evoking the souvenir of clever Jean Gobelin, we quitted the place, paying a visit, on our way through the Jardin des Plantes, to the white Polar bear, whom we hoped to find more comfortable, but who was still rocking his head from side to side with the intolerable heat of the chilly autumnal afternoon.—Paris Letter.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

The intelligent correspondent of the Boston Advertiser, who thinks Mr. McCulloch "a gentleman and an honest man," expresses the following further opinion of him: "His whole course with respect to internal revenue matters has been one of giving-way. He knows where the scoundrels are, well enough—he would be as glad as the country to see the whole whisky ring in jail. But he does not want to come to an open rupture with the President; he wants nothing said that can irritate the President; he wants to retain his office, with a modest and laudable purpose, I admit, and has not vigor enough to assert his prerogatives."

The correspondent of the Boston Post, speaking of "Southern sentiment," says that "prominent Southern gentlemen now express entire satisfaction with the election of Grant. A leading member of the Mobile bar says that Seymour's election would have been unfortunate for the South, as he would have been unable to render them any assistance, while defeat would only have exasperated the Radical Congress, and rendered them more tyrannical than before."

The same correspondent says: A number of prominent politicians have already arrived here from the North, determined to be on time to have a finger in the Cabinet pie. It is understood, however, that General Grant will give no intimation whatever of his purpose until the vote of the Electoral College has been cast, although it is generally believed by his friends that he has already fixed upon his Cabinet without the assistance of his friends.

The President is said to be thoroughly in earnest in the war he is making on the Treasury Department. A correspondent says: "The President is striking for higher game this time than the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. He means to bring down that officer also, but he is training his guns directly upon the head of the Treasury Department. Indeed, he hopes to bag three officials with one shot—Mr. Secretary McCulloch, Mr. Commissioner Rollins and Mr. District Attorney Courtney. [illegible]"

FROM STEUBENVILLE.

Resources and Surroundings of Steubenville—Valuable Coal Vein—Area and Quality—Rolling Mills—Where Wealth Is—Stores, Mines, Mills, Schools, Churches—Rev Andrew Hull—An Invitation.

Special Correspondence of Pittsburgh Commercial.

STEUBENVILLE O., November 9, 1868.

Though this is one of the oldest places on the Ohio river, and though it is backed by a country of great fertility and is almost entirely free from miasmatic diseases, yet until within a few years but very little has been known of it, of the country that lies about it, or of the sources of wealth with which it is charged. The swift tide of emigration that for years past flowed from the East and from Europe to the West and Northwest, in its course rushed by many regions quite as productive as the region to which it hurried, and in other respects far richer and much more certain to yield wealth as the compensation of energy and industry. "Go farther and fare worse" was never more fully demonstrated than in this. Men rushed past the rich lands of Indiana to Illinois, to Iowa or Minnesota. Emigrants closed their eyes passing through Eastern Ohio, and never opened them until they reached the wilds of Missouri or Kansas, and when they did, they shut from their view a country fuller of resources and a soil as productive as the wildest of the lands they went to. But, like all other fevers, this far-western fever was increasing. The West was the "wonder land" to the emigrant's mental vision; it yielded title deeds for boundless acres, but never a vision of the toil and privations and hardships before they would be gained, or of the time when posterity would scatter them again. Few, if any, of them ever thought that the same industry, economy and endurance would produce greater and speedier wealth in Western Pennsylvania or Eastern Ohio. The same number of acres might not be gained, but, beyond a certain quantity, acres mean no more than the dollars that will buy them, for, for tilling purposes, great farms are great follies. But whether this be true or not, of what value is one hundred acres more than ten, if the ten realize as much as the hundred? What does a man gain by leaving Eastern Ohio or passing it, with its fertile soil and its vast mineral resources, close to the great markets, and ready to yield the largest net return to labor, to go away to Kansas and Minnesota, where it requires three-fourths of the productions to remove the other fourth to market? Occasionally an emigrant to the far West may get rich by a lucky chance, but that is the rare exception. The rule is—wealth means toil, energy and economy, and that is just what it means here, and no more. The emigrant possessed of these sterling qualities, and who will put them in exercise, can readily test the truth of this. But our farm lands are not all that are of value to us. Nor is the field of agriculture the only one that invites the emigrant or the capitalist to fortune. This country lies in the great "Allegheny coal field," and under every foot of the country there are two or three workable veins of coal. Under this city there is a vein, which, for the manufacture of iron, is said to have no superior in the Ohio Valley. I have not been able as yet to institute a comparison between the coal here and the "Mahoning coal," but it has been fairly and fully tested with the Pittsburgh, Wheeling and other Ohio Valley coals, and at the Jefferson rolling mill furnace, where the Steubenville coal is used in the smelting of ores and irons, to the exclusion of all other coals, it is pronounced to be more free from sulphur than most of the coals known and used, and equally free from sulphur with the best coal in the Allegheny coal field. The Jefferson rolling mills obtain their coal from their shaft, a few feet from their works, about one-half mile below the city. Their vein is four feet thick and is found below a heavy sandstone formation, at a depth of one hundred and seventy-five feet, the same vein is struck about two and a half miles further down the river, at two hundred and seven feet; there it is a little under four feet thick. This vein was first reached by a shaft sunk near the junction of Ninth and Market streets in the city, at a depth of two hundred and fifty-seven feet, but the point of surface penetration is ninety-nine feet higher than the ground surface at the rolling mill shaft, which is half a mile further to the southeast. These shafts prove the Steubenville vein to cover a very wide area, known to be at least four miles up and down the river, and believed to extend double that distance, that it is certainly one mile, and if external evidence is to be believed, is five or six miles in width, with an average dip from northwest to southeast of six feet to the mile. The vein runs with considerable uniformity at four feet two inches thick, getting slightly thicker as it bears North, until at the workings in the city shaft it is found to be four feet eight inches thick. This vein, wherever tested, produces the same results, showing no perceptible change of quality or increase of sulphur. The Jefferson rolling mills, I have said, use the coal of this vein, and no other coal, and it is said the nails manufactured by them are equal to the best Wheeling nails. Whether this be so or not, they command the same price in the market. This company own another mill, of about equal capacity, in Wheeling, a part of the iron for which is rolled in the Steubenville mill. The profits from these two mills were, for the year last, [illegible] and for this year [illegible] the net profits were one hundred and seventy-five thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars. I hope the company will pardon the mention of these figures, but no other method of stating my point so forcibly occurs to me, for they are in fact "the proof of the pudding." These works are large I know, and the men who own them are men of large capacity and experience, who conduct them with skill, yet their profits are suggestive. [illegible] There is not a citizen here who would have Spaulding, Woodward & Co. (owners of the Jefferson rolling mill) realize one cent less, for, apart from the benefit their works are to the city, they are an open-handed, public-spirited firm, but we would use their success as an invitation to other iron men. Here are vacant grounds, with the same river and railroad facilities that the Jefferson works have, and here is the same vein of coal, out of which the owners of the Jefferson works are making nails and a fortune, and here are a people who will welcome [illegible]. To such as may think of coming permit me to say this is no "one-horse" town. The trade to this place sustains six first class wholesale grocery houses, who keep on hand full lines of goods and who claim to sell lower than Wheeling, and as low as New York or Baltimore, plus the freight. We have also two wholesale drug stores, one wholesale clothing store, one wholesale liquor store, two daily newspapers, two notion and fancy goods jobbing houses, two first-class female seminaries, a public high school, and all the public schools required by the population, two Presbyterian (O. S.) [illegible] Methodist Episcopal, one colored M. E., one Disciples, one Lutheran and one Episcopal church. This last has been without a rector for several months, but Rev. Andrew Hull, who for seventeen years was rector of the parish of Elmira, New York, has accepted the call of the parish, and yesterday preached morning and evening. Mr. H. has a fine appearance and manner; there is a good deal of inspiration in his face, which is both benevolent and strong; in addition to this he is a most excellent reader and an efficient sermonizer.

He comes among us with an excellent record, and the people who have called him find in his sermons more than they anticipated, and in himself the promise of a great usefulness, which they will zealously labor to help him fulfill.

In addition to the churches we have a Young Men's Christian Association, in the rooms of which the Commercial and other first-class dailies, together with the best weeklies and magazines, can always be found. In addition to this, the society has a library of several hundred volumes, and it fosters an annual course of lectures from such lecturers as Anna Dickinson, Vincent, Gough, Phillips and Douglass. These are among the attractions we have to offer to all who will come to seek wealth out of our coal field.

MERWINE.

Curiosities of the Sea Shore.

One of the chief and ever-present attractions of a sea-side residence is found in the rich variety of animated life which crowds the rocks and swarms along the shore. I do not mean the fish, whether wearing shells or scales, but the great tribe of radiate animals, as naturalists call them, including the beautiful sea anemones, jelly fish, sea urchins, and star fishes, which are among the most wonderful and interesting specimens of nature's handiwork. A discerning eye finds myriads of smaller forms of life clinging to the sea girt rocks, or to the mossy sides of those hundreds of miniature aquaria, scooped by the cunning hand of nature among the stony cliffs, and lined with many colored seaweeds.

The exposed ledges are often found swarming with yellow barnacles, that turn white at low tide, by exposure to the sun. These little sentinel animals, though displaying to the eye no sign of life, closely locked in their tiny houses of shell, know well enough how to make their living, and where to "paddle their own canoe." In the adjoining pools of clear water we behold them with their mouths thrown open, and their feelers out to catch the particles of nourishment that float by them continually. This tiny little tenant of the seas does not belong to the order of shellfish, as is commonly supposed; the young barnacle has no shell, but a jointed or articulated body, and swims freely in all directions. But a time arrives in the life of every barnacle when it secures a hold upon something or other, becomes attached, head downward, to that object, loses forever the power of locomotion and of sight, secretes a hard shell around it, and becomes, for the rest of its inglorious life, dependent upon the drifting sustenance brought to it by the flow of the tide. From this little article in the land of creation—from the barnacle up to man, what a stride! Yet the life of this insignificant and unseen little animal is symbolical, and many a human barnacle [illegible] can be found, without a microscope, by looking among the fossil political formations of most governments.

A COMPANY has been organized to build a wooden track railroad from Portage Lake to the Cliff Mine, or beyond, the route extending from Hancock to the eastward, skirting along the bluffs of Portage Lake to the east side of the Range, the summit of which would be attained near the Edwards mine, thence diagonally across a portion of the Range, to the line, a little west of the Calumet group, or through the Albany, Boston, and skirting the south side of the Greenstone Range in Keweenaw county. The capital stock is [illegible], in [illegible] shares, and in twenty-four hours seven-tenths of the whole was subscribed, and the first installment of five per cent. paid in. The road is to be graded in the ordinary manner, rough timbers [illegible] laid along as stringers, cross-ties laid on these, and squared strips of wood for rails keyed on the cross-ties. On these it is proposed to run light locomotives and trains of cars. These locomotives are manufactured in Pittsburgh.

HOLDERS of cotton goods have been obliged to submit to a smart decline. The views of buyers and sellers have been "apart" ever since the season for fall trade set in. Both parties have really expected that prices would have to give way in the end, and it has been rather a trial of strength, with the view on the part of holders to disposing of present stocks without a loss. How far this movement must proceed it is impossible to say with any assurance. One thing will serve to stiffen prices, and that is the increasing certainty that the cotton crop for the year has been greatly overestimated for speculative effect. But the fact is nevertheless plain that the material and the manufactured goods have been apart; and they might just as well come together now as any time.

Amendment of the Treaty of Paris.

The Alabama Claims.

LONDON, November 10.—Minister Reverdy Johnson's statement that the difficulties between England and the United States, in regard to the Alabama claims being ended, is regarded as too strong, and is entirely unwarranted. The highest authorities interested say nothing reliable has been settled; no arbitrator has been selected, and Minister Johnson and Lord Stanley have agreed only that both Governments shall choose arbitrators to decide the extent of England's liabilities for the depredations of the Alabama and her right to recognize the Confederates as belligerents. In the event of the liability question being decided adverse to the American views all claims drop, and if otherwise each Government appoints two commissioners, who jointly choose a fifth, to act as President. The Governments jointly appoint a Secretary, each paying half his salary. The duties of the commission shall be to examine separately each claim of the two countries.

At Minister Johnson's own suggestion, the Commission is to meet in London, because, as he says, most of the evidence, documentary and verbal, will be found here.

The statement of the Times, that it had been agreed that the arbitrator be an European King, by which it means more definitely King William of Prussia and that the United States have decided not to press the question of the right of England to recognize the rebellion, are manifestly incorrect. I am authorized to state that the governments will jointly select the arbitrator, and the question of recognition will form the principal subject of the arbitration. The character of these negotiations has caused considerable dissatisfaction among influential citizens, representing those Englishmen friendly to the loyal Americans during the war. On the other hand it is said that the Tories have been using Minister Johnson for political purposes, and on the other that the rebels have been using the Tories for their own purposes.

THE SIAMESE TWINS.

Can Their Separation be Safely Undertaken?

BY DR. PAUL F. EVE.

[From the Louisville Medical Journal.]

Our newspaper editors are again speculating and writing romantic articles on the above question, incited by the assertion that Messrs Chang and Eng are about visiting Paris to find a surgeon bold enough to undertake their separation. The whole movement is but another evidence of the lamentable ignorance of the public in medical matters, and of the prurient delight which the world always take in wrapping everything connected with the human system in the grossest mystery. There never has been a question among medical men, either in this country or in Europe, in regard to the feasibility of the separation of these two individuals; that they are two beings, having distinct, segregated and perfect organizations, one from the other, as any other two individuals; that there is no physical, moral or mental unity between them, the only connection being a short cartilaginous and integumental band common to the two, the severance of which would, in all probability, be entirely harmless; that no "sensation, nervous impressions, physical, morbid, mental or nervo-mental condition" ever exhibited a "physical unity in their dual corporal existence;" that they have no unity of conceptions, impulses, thoughts, &c.; that it never was the professional opinion that the death of one of the brothers would instantly be followed by that of the other, or that their separation was surrounded by fearful difficulties; and that the link now binding them together is not a means of perfect physical union by which sensation or impressions are conveyed from one to another. There is, in fact, nothing more common between these Siamese than what would have been acquired by any other twins indissolubly united by a ligament or metallic cord and subjected, as they have ever been to precisely similar circumstances from birth. Indeed, the band uniting them is almost insensible, so much so that, on ship-board, they were pulled about by a rope tied to it. No pulsating vessel has ever been detected in it, though, undoubtedly, it is just here and no where else, in the center of this cord, made up of gristle and skin and for about an inch on either side, that there are vessels and nerves communicating from one to another. Here, but no where else, a touch on the space indicated is felt by both. Precisely here, and here alone in the band uniting them, there is sensation and nothing else whatever common to both. If they are inclined to sleep, eat, &c., and perform the functions of life with great similarity and agree always in their tastes and habits, we must recollect that their surroundings, position, &c., have all been precisely alike. People forget, too, that one of them is irritable, the other very mild; one of them is the larger, stronger and more intelligent, and he controls the other. His slightest movement is followed by the weaker one from necessity, and not, as is generally supposed, from unity of will or harmonious action. They play games, one against the other, and have quarreled just like other good brethren, and more than once. While at sea, one wanted to take a cold bath, to which the other objected, and the Captain had to interfere to produce a reconciliation. How absurd, then, to talk of perfect consentaneous thought, action, &c., between them.

The decision given by the profession in Europe and America, thirty-eight years ago, when this case was first put on exhibition, was that the ligament of union was cartilaginous, probably a prolongation of the ensiform cartilage from the sternum, and the chief, if not the only objection to its division has been that the peritoneum might be involved in the operation. It was, moreover, not one demanded by surgery, for the twins had lived, and might yet live, for years; the question of separation, therefore, was with themselves, or their guardians, and not the profession. There were no disagreements, no differences, among the doctors on this subject. The case was involved in no mystery, and the diagnosis was easily made; the London Lancet, of 1830, even declared that it was more rare than curious. By the ecraseur, or knife, any student who has attended a course of lectures may perform this operation with success, and which, moreover, should be attempted even by any one in case of death, taking care to divide the parts nearer the one deceased. It would appear, then, that there are no good reasons why these naturalized Asiatics should have been permitted to violate the seventh commandment, by common consent, without even a rebuke.

As there exists no academy of physicians and surgeons in Paris, the Siamese may be on a wild goose chase, which their family physician might have prevented, as well as the wild and fanciful speculations regarding them which are now crowding our daily papers. The scientific world, too, especially those engaged in the study of medicine and surgery, as the press is kind enough to observe, may not, therefore, be "intensely interested" after all, and the public may be free again to direct their attention to something more important and better understood than the contemplated separation of Chang and Eng.

EXACT TRUTH ABOUT QUEEN VICTORIA.

Her Peculiarities—Causes of Her Unpopularity.

The New York Independent recently contained the following interesting article:

"Two years ago, or thereabouts, a wretched little paper, published in Lausanne, Switzerland, indulged itself in some scandalous stories about the Queen of Great Britain and the British representative at Berne, or one of his subordinates, had the folly to elevate the libel into importance by prosecuting the journalist. This was, perhaps, the first time that any scandal about Queen Victoria found its way into print. Long before this, however, Queen Victoria's loyal subjects had talked about her as Mrs. Candor talks of some of her friends. At last these whisperings began to find distinct and open expression. A weekly paper called the Tomahawk was started in London and made itself famous at once by a cartoon entitled 'A Brown Study.' The artist represented a heavy Scotchman, of the lower class, with kilt and sporran, standing on the steps of the British throne, while the British lion gazed from below with wondering and puzzled eyes at the audacious and nonchalant intruder, somewhat as the Emperor Alexis Comnenius, in Scott's novel, looks astounded at the Frank count, Robert of Paxis, lounging in the imperial seat. The cartoon in the Tomahawk was admirably executed; it was the work of a man of genius in his way—Matt. Morgan, one of the principal scene painters of the Covent Garden Theater. The paper, which had not then and has not had since any literary merit whatever, became celebrated and popular in a moment. People were scandalized, shocked, amused, aroused. Tomahawk's cartoon had, in fact, illustrated what everybody had been talking about, wondering at and grumbling over.

"This is the scandal about Queen Victoria. In her personal service, her most constant and close attendant is a Scotch groom, or gillie, named John Brown. He rides on the box of her carriage, he hands her in, he hands her out, he cloaks her, shawls her, opens doors for her, is always near her. Popular rumor avers that he sleeps on a rug outside her bedroom door; and although this certainly is not his habit, it is beyond doubt that he has done so occasionally, while the Queen was traveling. He has been so closely, indeed, in attendance on the Queen that unquestionably there might be grave cause for scandal were he a Rizzio or a Potomkin, even though she was not a Mary Stuart or a Catharine the Second. Add to this, that the ladies of the family of Brunswick have not in previous generations been always virtuous. Chacun a son gout, said the impertinent court lady to George III.'s mother, in allusion to the famous scandal about that princess and the Earl of Bute. Take further into consideration the fact that all the Westend tradesmen, dressmakers, milliners, cooks and lackeys absolutely detest Queen Victoria, because of the dullness created by her long retirement, and that it has become an article of faith with all that class that the depression of trade, and even the financial collapse of England, are to be directly attributed to the Queen's protracted and inconvenient seclusion. Think then how delighted all that class must have been when it first became whispered about that the sorrow of the royal lady was not quite heavenly, after all. Is it wonderful that the scandal was eagerly and delightedly spread? In fact, people busily spread it who did not in their hearts believe it; and before long it became the universal talk—a whisper of London. The Queen began to be spoken of in slang phrase as 'Mrs. Brown.' Punch one day published, under the head of 'Court News,' the announcement that 'Mrs. John Brown walked on the slopes yesterday.' Great mirth was created once by an odd jumble of names in a London daily paper, which, giving a report of some popular demonstration, said the proceedings closed with the singing of 'God Save the Queen and John Brown'—the fact meant to be conveyed being that the meeting sang the national anthem, and also our famous hymn to the memory of the Harper's Ferry martyr. Things went so far that the Queen in her recent book actually inserted a passage explaining the position of John Brown in her household. It is needless to say that those who love scandal and like to believe it, liked and believed it none the less because of this well-meant attempt at explanation.

"What is the exact truth in all this? The Queen is a good, pure, true-hearted woman—a little given to eccentricity at the best of times, lately so shaken and even shattered in nerves as to be occasionally not quite mistress of herself. This John Brown—an honest, dense, thick-headed Scotchman—was a faithful servant of Prince Albert. His face and name are associated with the memory of some of Victoria's very happiest days. How tenderly she loved her husband, how she delighted in his society, nobody needs to be told. The classic woman who swallowed the ashes of her dead lord did not love more wholly and absorbingly than did the heavy-featured, uninteresting Queen of England. She clings to the old servant of her husband as she might to her husband's dog. But it is beyond all question that a certain taint of nervous excitability—one does not like to call it madness—is an element in the feelings which inspire the Queen to defy scandal in England. It is commonly said by those who defend the Queen that she labors under the delusion that the soul of Prince Albert has been transformed into the homely frame of John Brown. This is a wild exaggeration; but it is quite true that the manner in which the Queen connects the memory of Prince Albert with the presence of John Brown has something morbid, fantastic, and almost monomaniacal in it. If it is not madness (yet that way madness lies,) she has frequent fits of nervous irritation, which would seem to those unaccustomed to them to border upon frenzy. Not long since (this story is the simple truth,) two of the Cabinet Ministers were at Osborne, conversing in a sort of informal council with Her Majesty. A page, charged with some messages, tapped at the door—two or three light taps. The Queen, who had been talking and listening with great interest, became so startled and excited by the sound that she screamed, sprang up, paced the room in the wildest alarm, and for a long time was utterly unable to settle down to calm and rational conversation of any kind. Under the influence of morbid attacks like these, there is sometimes little reliance to be placed on what the Queen may say, or determine, or do. She was always somewhat inclined to be headstrong; now she is apt to form sudden plans, or take sudden resolves, from which nothing can divert her. She will leave London and rush to Osborne or to Balmoral, at the most critical period of a session, at a moment when a change of ministry may be impending; and, when she has resolved on any such escapade, no remonstrance or advice can dissuade her. In this way she has insisted on keeping John Brown as her personal attendant, and allowing him to be conspicuous in his attentions everywhere; and no servants' ball or club scandal can induce her to send him to the back ground, or to alter her friendly deportment toward him. Unquestionably, this is unwise; but Queen Victoria is not in a mental condition from which wisdom can be always expected. She is not mad—that is all any one can venture to say.

"She is unpopular—widely and profoundly unpopular. Not in the active, aggressive sense—not as George the Third was once unpopular, when brickbats and stones were pelted at his carriage; not as Adelaide, wife of William the Fourth, was unpopular, when a tumultuous meeting at Charing Cross threw up handkerchiefs in delight at O'Connell's daring allusion to Whitehall and the Sovereign who lost his head there because he allowed himself to be guided by his foreign wife—in no such sense is Victoria unpopular. But the mass of her people have ceased to care about her; the West End dislikes her, gently slanders her, flunkeyisms gird at her. Of personal loyalty to her there is little or none. A few high-minded politicians and their followers respect her virtues and pity her great sorrows, but ardent loyalty to her is dead. A distinguished Nova Scotian, lately in London, and fresh with all the fervor of the old-fashioned colonial loyalty, confessed to the writer of this article the profound disappointment which came over him when he found that, go where he would in the British capital, his loyal professions were received with wondering, puzzled, half contemptuous incredulity.

"Does any one in England desire that the Queen should abdicate? The West End tradesmen, dress-makers, and lackeys, perhaps; but no one else. The Prince of Wales is not a person whose accession to the throne any rational and disinterested being can look forward to without anxiety. He is a fat, heavy, loutish young man, growing every day more and more of a regular Brunswick mould and feature. He is not over attentive to his wife—the one member of the family who is really popular; he has low and vulgar tastes; he has a tainted reputation. Scandal pursued him from London to Paris, from Paris to Berlin, back again. He delights in low comic actors, and still lower comic singers. When he goes to the opera, he soon falls asleep; unless, indeed, when Pauline Lucca is singing—and then he is all ears and eyes. Nobody worth thinking of wants him for a King. He is a Prince Napoleon, without eloquence, without genuine, without Democratic sentiments, without love of letters and arts, without a grand imperial face; and just think what Prince Napoleon would be without all these redeeming merits! No! if the English people must have a Sovereign, let them hope that God may save the Queen as long as possible. Whatever her unhappy difficulties and failings, seldom comes a better; and the better is certainly not in sight just now."

THE New York Commercial, Tuesday evening, has the following:

The various rumors relative to the purposes of the Secretary of the Treasury have settled down upon the following facts. The Secretary has concluded that he has the discretion of reissuing retired three per cent. certificates. At present he has given no instructions for acting upon that conclusion; but, in the event of the pressure continuing very severe, and the balances in the Treasury being materially reduced, he would be willing to issue three per cent. certificates in exchange for bonds, to an extent not exceeding $18,000,000. These certificates would naturally be sent to the Treasury for redemption; and, in redeeming them, the Secretary would use retired but uncanceled United States notes. Substantially, this would be an exchange of greenbacks for bonds. There are, however, these objections against a present resort to the expedient; the Department considers the price of bonds too high to justify their purchase, and the currency balance is not now so low as to render the step necessary, the balance last night being in round numbers [illegible], or about the same as at the beginning of the month.

James Griffin, alias Stephens, alias Williams, alleged to have been connected with the Royal Insurance Company robbery in Wall street some time since, was arrested yesterday in New York. A considerable quantity of scrip of the Long Island Railroad Company, and a large package of cancelled checks, signed John A. Cross, were found in his possession. The prisoner was handed over to Capt. Jordan, to give that officer an opportunity to find the owner of the scrip and work up the case.

James Stokes and John Cunningham went to the house of Owen Reilly, near the corner of Winchester and Main streets, Memphis, yesterday morning, and attempted to whip Mrs. Reilly for remarks about Stokes's mother. Reilly resisted, when a fight ensued, during which he was shot in the back and groin, and probably mortally wounded. Stokes and Cunningham were arrested and committed.

SMALL NOTES.

A WONDERFUL PHENOMENON.

The Late Earthquake Throws Up Islands of Pure Gems from the Bed of the Pacific.

To the Editor of the St. Louis Times:

One of the most extraordinary stories ever read or written has since a late hour last night been gaining ground in certain quiet quarters of the city. It is so marvelous that one could scarcely believe it to be anything but the chimera of a madman's brain, if it were not confirmed by scientific facts, and by a vast number of the theories of modern philosophy. It is difficult to determine what amount of credibility we should attach to it, and it is best to let every man who reads the following paragraphs judge for himself. It will be remembered that the late catastrophe in South America occurred simultaneously with an extraordinary eclipse of the sun, which astronomers affirm, has not occurred before for two thousand years and will not occur again for two thousand years to come.

No event of equal magnitude to the late earthquake in South America has occurred since the days of Herculaneum and Pompeii; but the convulsion which overwhelmed those two cities was nearly local so far as is known, and of scarcely any extent compared to the late catastrophe, which shook the entire continent of America, from the river Sacramento to Cape Horn, and which must have been felt with a thousand times more terrific force out in the wide Pacific. A SEA MONSTER.

Description of the Serpent Killed at Eastport, Maine.

The strange animal killed near Eastport, Maine, has been on exhibition in that city during the past two weeks:

This animal, part fish and part beast, is over thirty feet in length, and girts twenty-one feet. It has one enormous dorsal fin, two side-belly fins, and a broad, shark-like tail. About one-third of its length forms its tail, in connection with small fins; it has two huge legs, terminating in web feet. Its mouth makes a line of five or six feet in length, the whole extent of which is set with innumerable small teeth very much resembling in size and shape the kernel of a species of short pointed pop corn. It has a series of gills, which overlap each other like the flounces once the style of ladies' dresses. Its immense body, which was estimated to have weighed, when captured, about eleven tons, has no framework of bones, its most solid portion consisting of cartilage incapable of preservation. Its skin is thick and tough, like that of the elephant and rhinoceros. There is no record of his species, and to none is it a greater wonder than to naturalists whose attention is being drawn to it. Among others who have had an opportunity of seeing it, is Prof. Baird, of the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, who is yet unable to place it in the known list of the animal kingdom. When first discovered it was swimming along leisurely, and when pursued took to the land, and when captured was a hundred and twenty feet above high-water mark. Numerous shots were fired at it, but none took effect till the gun was loaded with small spikes, which took effect, striking just above the main fore fin. On analyzing the stomach, it contained nothing but vegetable matter, which leads to the conclusion that it subsisted upon vegetation on the bottom of the ocean and shore.

A new occupation has lately been invented in New York, that of professional teachers of games and sports to boys out of school hours. A class of say fifteen youngsters, from eight to twelve years of age, is formed, and their teacher devotes two or three hours every afternoon to instructing them in the various games of the playground. With this instruction is combined the making of excursions at suitable times to various places of interest in the city and its neighborhood—the forts, islands, and so on. In winter skating, of course, occupies a large share of the attention of the class.

EXCELLENT SECURITY

THE FIRST MORTGAGE,

Thirty-Year, Six Per Cent.

GOLD BONDS

OF THE

Central Pacific

RAILROAD COMPANY.

These Bonds are the duly authorized and accredited obligations of one of the most responsible Corporations of the American Continent, and are secured by an absolute first lien upon the valuable grants, franchises, railroad equipment, business, etc., of the best portion of the

Great National Pacific Railroad Line,

Extending eastwardly from the navigable waters of the Pacific Coast to the lines now rapidly building from the Eastern States.

They bear six per cent. interest per annum, in gold, and BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST ARE EXPRESSLY MADE "PAYABLE IN UNITED STATES GOLD COIN."

The semi-annual Coupons are payable July 1st and January 1st, in New York City.

The purchaser is charged the accrued interest from the date of the last paid Coupon, AT THE CURRENCY RATE ONLY.

This issue of Bonds constitutes one of the Largest and most popular Corporate Loans of the country, and therefore will be constantly dealt in.

The greater portion of the Loan is now in the hands of steady investors; and it is probable that before many months, when the Road is completed and the Loan closed, THE BONDS WILL BE EAGERLY SOUGHT FOR AT THE HIGHEST RATES.

They are issued ONLY AS THE WORK PROGRESSES, and to the same extent only as the U. S. Subsidy Bonds granted by the Government to the Pacific Railroad Companies.

Nearly FIVE HUNDRED MILES of the road are now built, and the grading is well advanced on two hundred and fifty miles additional.

The THROUGH LINE ACROSS THE CONTINENT will be completed by the middle of next year, when the Overland travel will be very large.

The local business alone, upon the completed portion, is so heavy, and so advantageous, that the gross earnings average more than a Quarter of a Million in Gold per month, of which 35 per cent. only is required for operating expenses.

The net profit upon the Company's business on the completed portion, is about double the amount of annual interest liabilities to be assumed thereupon, and will yield A SURPLUS OF NEARLY A MILLION IN GOLD after expenses and interest are paid—even if the through connection were not made.

The best lands, the richest mines, together with the largest settlement and nearest markets, lie along this portion of the Pacific Railroad, and the future development of business thereon will be proportionately great.

From these considerations it is submitted that the

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD

BONDS,

Secured by a First Mortgage on so productive a property are among the most promising and reliable securities now offered. No better Bonds can be made.

A portion of the remainder of this Loan is now offered to investors at

103 PER CENT., AND

ACCRUED INTEREST, IN CURRENCY.

The Bonds are of $1,000 each.

☞ The Company reserves the right to advance the price at any time, but all orders actually in transitu at the time of any such advance will be filled at present price. [illegible]

We receive all classes of Government Bonds, at their full market rates, in exchange for the Central Pacific Railroad Bonds, thus enabling the holders to realize from 5 TO 10 PER CENT. PROFIT and keep the principal of their investment equally secure.

Orders and inquiries will receive prompt attention. Information, Descriptive Pamphlets, etc., giving a full account of the Organization, Progress, Business and Prospects of the Enterprise, furnished on application. Bonds sent by return Express at our cost.

MARGARET MERLYN, IS THE TITLE of Mrs. SWISSHELM's long-talked of Book. It is a tale of Woman's Wrongs, and abounds in the home truths for which the author is noted, and which are here interwoven with a dramatic interest that is unflagging to the end. An accomplished critic who has read it says: "There is not a dull page in it." It gives startling revelations of the inside workings of private benevolent institutions, and must be deeply interesting to all who would like to know what sometimes is done with the money paid to charitable societies. It will be commenced as a serial, November 26, and run eight months, in the St. Cloud "Journal," the successor to Mrs. Swisshelm's St. Cloud (Minnesota) "Visiter," which is now the largest paper and has double the circulation of any other in Northern Minnesota, and contains minute information of that most interesting portion of our unknown countries—The Great Northwest. Terms of subscription $2 per annum in advance. Address WM. B. MITCHELL, St. Cloud, Minnesota.

COLBURN'S PATENT.

Patented July 9, 1867. Re-issued Aug. 18, 1868.

FREDERICKTOWN, KNOX COUNTY, O.,
November 2, 1868.

LIPPINCOTT & BAKEWELL:

Messrs—I received your second Red Jacket Axe per express, and now acknowledge the receipt thereof; and for the benefit of all whose desires or necessities make it their business to chop with an axe to say, to try the Red Jacket; and as the Supreme Court have held that a doctor's opinions without his reasons are of but little value, I would therefore give my reasons: 1. The Red Jacket cuts deeper than the common bit. 2. It being round on the cut it does not stick in the wood. 3. Every chopper with the common Axe must discover that there is as much labor and strength expended in taking the Axe out of the cut as there is in making the blow. 4. This with the Red Jacket is all avoided, and from one-third to one-half the labor is saved in cutting the same quantity. 5. By putting in the same labor that is necessary with a common Axe, you can easily make at least thirty-three per cent. more wood in same time.

You are safe in letting any honest man try your Red Jacket on these tests, and if it fails refund him his money.

Respectfully yours,
HARRY BALDWIN.

Is Sickness Avoidable?

Thousands lose on sick-beds to-day, who might have been well and hearty, had they taken due precautions for the preservation of that most precious of earthly blessings, a sound mind in a sound body. Sickness, to a greater extent than most people suppose, is avoidable. When the body is languid, the spirits depressed, and the nervous system unnaturally sensitive, it should be taken for granted that mischief is brewing. These hints and warnings, vouchsafed as such by a kind Providence, ought not to be disregarded. [illegible] HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. [illegible]
